Verdi and his librettist and friend Francesco Maria Piave based La forza del destino on Ángel de Saavedra's highly dramatic play Don Alvaro, o la fuerza del sino, and also incorporated material from Schiller's Wallenstein's Camp for Act III's military scenes. Following Forza's 1862 St Petersburg premiere, Verdi made extensive revisions to the score.

La forza del destino — Productions — Royal Opera House

La Forza del Destino “is an opera of vast dimensions and needs great care”; these are Verdi’s words shortly after the premiere of the work at the Imperial Theater, St. Petersburg, on November 10, 1862. In the manner of his beloved Shakespeare, the composer had chosen as the basis for his 24th opera a drama that included both scenes of tragedy and comedy, written by Spanish playwright Angel de Saavedra, Duke of Rivas.

This sentence uttered by Fra Melitone, the grouchy monk from La forza del destino (The Power of Destiny), could be programmatic for Giuseppe Verdi's opera, which was premièred in 1861. Indeed, in this musical drama, the world is very much out of joint. The almost 50-year-old Verdi sketched a merciless portrait of a broken society in this colossal melodrama; a society wracked by war, in which love, affection and compassion only fleetingly brighten the darkness of the world.
